

Tenth Annual African Vaccinology Course

10-14 November 2014, Cape Town, South Africa

About the course:

- Convened by Prof. Gregory D. Hussey of the VACFA, University of Cape Town, the annual African Vaccinology Course, now on its 10th consecutive year, has become a very popular training program for African vaccinologists.

Aims of the course:

- To provide participants with essential expertise to support national immunisation programmes
- To build sustainable research capacity for vaccine development and conducting high quality phase I-IV vaccine trials in Africa
- To foster communication and networking among African vaccinologists

Special course session on meet the specialist:

- Participants ask any vaccines-related questions to a panel of experts
- Discussions on practical vaccine-related field experiences from the participants and the experts

Who should attend?

- Immunisation program managers
- Researchers and public health professionals working in the field of vaccines (immunology, immunisation activities such as advocacy)

Applications are now open!!!! Visit: www.vacfa.com (deadline: 30 June 2014)

Vaccine topics to be covered during the 5 day course includes:

New & underused vaccines

Vaccination strategies

Adverse events monitoring & reporting

Immunology

Media engagement/communication